"Keeping Your Source Code Yours"

HELPING COMMERCIAL SOFTWARE TEAMS
REDUCE THE RISKS OF USING OPEN SOURCE
SOFTWARE BY IDENTIFYING AND MANAGING THE LICENSE OBLIGATIONS INSIDE.

There are several hundred thousand free open source packages on the internet. Downloading some of it to use inside your commercial software can be a good idea, as it is free, and can save time and money.

However, open source has license obligations that must be fulfilled to avoid legal liabilities. Some open source software can contaminate the rest of your intellectual property, forcing you to give away your own software. Because of past lawsuits, many customers are now demanding an accurate accounting of the open source within any commercial software that they buy.

At Source Auditor, we use our extensive expertise and massive knowledge base of open source software and license obligations to provide you with a fast and accurate inventory of your open source and resultant license obligations.

Our technical analysis finds open source even when only a snippet is present and when the copyrights have been removed.

Our technical analysis also identifies viral contamination of your proprietary software due to linkages, while eliminating obligations that come from open source that is not deployed to customers.

Through our experience auditing thousands of open source packages across platforms ranging from consumer electronics devices, hosted software as a service, and enterprise software, we provide you with technical recommendations and solutions to any issues we identify.
